

Home Inspector School

In every city nationwide, every year, thousands of homes require inspection. Thus, the career of the new millennium is home inspector.

The

demand for home inspection professionals has always been huge. The demand is growing, because people are always moving, relocating, or investing in new homes. Home inspector is a profession that is as exciting as it is profitable. Real estate inspection (such as home inspection) is a technical and complex field which requires a professional and trained approach. To get the necessary training and technical background required for this job, you need to attend a home inspection school.

Home

inspection school provides the proper training for you to learn the basics of this highly technical job. The main functions of the home inspector is to perform objective visual inspections of homes and produce written reports of the condition of these properties for buyers and/or owners. You can't do any of these without the training you get from home inspection school.

This education helps you recognize not just the working status of a home's systems, but to identify potential problems, as well.

Home inspection ensures that the home buyer has all the information he or she needs in order to make an intelligent decision. Thus, the role of a home inspector is quite important. Without the expertise of the inspector, the home buyer might enter into a financial mess instead of a the great investment of a new home.

Home inspection school gives you the knowledge you need in residential construction (such as soils, foundations, plumbing, electricity, heating and ventilation, wood and construction, roofing, air conditioning, heat pumps, appliances, swimming pools and spas, termites and wood-destroying insects, and environmental considerations).

Below is a list of a few home inspection schools

A

Better School of Building Inspection

This school offers both extensive home study and classroom courses. It also provides you with continuing education courses, so your skills in home inspection are always up-to-date. Some of their programs include:

- * Online home inspector business, marketing, and liability
- * Inspection forms
- * State licensing and certification
- * Commercial inspection
- * Residential inspection home study
- * Live, hands-on, in-the-field courses and schedule
- * New construction/code

Allied Real Estate Schools

This

school offers distance learning courses online for US Residents and members of the military. A specialist in the technical and complex field of home inspection, Allied demands a professional approach in all of their courses. This home inspection school provides you with training programs and opportunities for internships.

Education Direct

This

school serves international countries, the US, and Canada. It is also a school that offers distance learning. Their certification course includes details on inspecting the exteriors and interiors of homes, checking heating and air conditioning, and more.